5. (2 points) Perl is one of the very few languages that supports both static and dynamic scope. Research this issue and give one example of a problem where dynamic scope is useful. Cite your source.

6. (2 points) Javascript does not require variable declarations, but creating undeclared variables has unusual implications with respect to scope and visibility. Find out what these are and explain why not requiring declarations might not have been a good design decision.